

THE CYBER DEFENSE REVIEW

---

CALL FOR PAPERS: COVID-19 Implications for Cyber

Theme: COVID-19

Important Dates

Full Article Submission Deadline: November 15, 2020

Notification of Article Acceptance: January 15, 2021

Spring CDR Publication: April 15, 2021

What are the cyber considerations amid a global pandemic? How are nation-states leveraging social media to exploit COVID-19? How to ensure government and business continuity during COVID-19?

The Cyber Defense Review (CDR) seeks multidisciplinary research articles, commentaries, and research notes related to cyber and the COVID-19 pandemic. This special edition will explore “COVID-19 Implications for Cyber” in the context of (1) Data Privacy and Surveillance, (2) Exploitation of Fear, Anxiety, and Social Upheaval, (3) National Security and Geopolitical Implications, (4) Sources of Information and Disinformation, and (5) Preparedness and Resilience.

The CDR is the leading U.S. Government journal on cyber. It provides a venue for intellectual dialogue, fresh ideas, relevant content, and insight into future trends from scholars, innovators, and policy-makers. Accepted papers will be compiled into the Spring 2021 issue as a COVID-19 special edition of the CDR. The CDR is distributed through JSTOR – the world’s premier digital library – and included in their “Security Studies Collection,” reaching 8,000 research institutions and libraries in 160 countries.

Submission Guidelines

Authors are asked to submit original, unpublished research papers (3,000 to 7,000 words) and commentaries / research notes (2,000 to 3,000 words) through the CDR ScholarOne submission platform. All submissions will go through a double-blind peer review process, and the editors will provide feedback to every author. We look forward to the global cyber community contributing thought-provoking submissions on “COVID-19 Implications for Cyber.”

Submit papers via ScholarOne: <https://mc04.manuscriptcentral.com/cyberdr>

Indicate your intention to be considered for the Special Edition in the Submission notes.

We look forward to your CDR submissions and thank you for joining the cyber conversation!